

ABSTRACT

In an electricity system real time price information is fed from an price feeder directly to the equipment or the meter central of an end consumer and the consumer is charged a price corresponding to the real-time price as set on the exchange. The end consumer is thereby enabled to control his/her power consumption more efficiently. Thus, the end consumer can take advantage of low prices as well as reduce consumption when the price exceeds some limit.

0957437-093404